RESEARCH STATEMENT AND FIELDS OF INTEREST

Salvatore Iaccarino specializes in Structural Geology and Tectonics, with a particular interest on the evolution of both modern and ancient orogenic belts. His research activity is focused on the structural characterization and on the tectono-metamorphic evolution of crystalline basements, using a multidisciplinary approach. He integrates structural-geological data, from the map- & meso-scale down to microscale (including petrofabric and textural analysis), with information from metamorphic petrology (with the aid of both forward and inverse modelling) and from geochronology (including U-Th/Pb monazite, zircon, rutile etc.. petrochronology; Ar/Ar mica geochronology and U-Th-Sm/He thermochronology) with the aim of investigating processes, and their rates, active during the geodynamic evolution of orogenic belts. Particular attention is paid to (1) growth and evolution of orogens, (2) deformations, metamorphism, and exhumation of deep-seated crustal rocks, (3) kinematics, strain, flow regime and rheology of high-strain shear zones. Field areas includes examples of both "small cold orogens" and of "large hot orogens". Currently, he is working mainly on the Himalaya-Tibet orogenic system (Nepal, India, SE Tibet) and on the N. Apennine, W Alps and Southern Variscan Belt (Sardinia, Maures Massif, External Crystalline Massifs). He is also involved in projects related to the geology of Antarctica (Ross Orogen, North Victoria Land) and of the Southern Brasilia Belt.
